PSYCHOANALYTIC PSYCHOTHERAPY

Trinity College Dublin

Start date: September 2021

This highly respected and well-established training has, for over 20 years, provided the only clinical training in Child and Adolescent Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy in Ireland including a two-year infant observation component. This four-year part-time training leads to an MSc and professional qualification in Child and Adolescent Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy. Graduates are eligible to work with children in a variety of mental health settings.

Child and Adolescent psychoanalytic psychotherapy is a clinical approach to therapeutic work with children, spanning the years from infancy through adolescence. It is rooted in psychoanalytic theory and emphasizes the significance of early childhood experiences and relationships and their impact on the internal world of the child. A wide range of emotional, mental health and relationship difficulties can be addressed in therapy. This training places significant emphasis on experiential learning and the acquisition of specific skills for working with children and adolescents. Upon completion of the mandatory clinical hours, students will meet the requirements for accreditation with the Irish Council for Psychotherapy (ICP) and the European Association of Psychotherapy (EAP).
